PHIL KOGAN & SKC CLOTHING

As its local fashion pick, Ça Va Magazine presents the collaboration of two local talents – the Washington DC based fashion photographer, Phil Kogan and Sha'Koju Clothing designer along with the Nigerian-American model, Asanat Akibu. In picking the multicultural designer, Ça Va Magazine brings forth its diversity aspect, for what it is known. As part of its efforts to feature fresh fashion talent and provide a platform for new comers on the block, Ça Va Magazine picked these two young and talented fashionistas to adorn its pages.

ABOUT THE TEAM:

Phil Kogan is a Washington DC based photographer who works in fashion, beauty, portrait, and fashion event photography. Phil's work has appeared in Charleston Magazine, Council Magazine, the DC Fashion Week Newsletter, as well as on numerous fashion designer and fashion retailer web sites. He has worked on the portfolios of several notable Washington designers. Phil was also featured in the "Portraits of DC" exhibition at the Washington Convention Center and the "Faces" show at Washington School of Photography.

Sha'Koju Clothing (SKC) is a women's-wear clothing line that caters to those with a love for multicultural fashion. Established in August 2011 by Asanat Akibu, who began her fashion career in her late teens and is now the creative designer of the clothing line. The experience and knowledge that she gained both on and off the runway, has helped to shape her clothing company into a brand name. Clients can choose between ready-to-wear items from the collections or custom designs that cater to their lifestyle. You can find her clothing online at www.Shakojuclouthing.com.
